

Fearing that Rāma may return at any moment, hurriedly carrying the crying Sītā, Rāvaṇa escaped, with the speed of wind.

Then, leaving Sītā for a moment, Rāvaṇa took his sword and in irrepressible anger cut off the wings of the wise old king-of-birds, Jaṭāyu.